Ex-mayor sees funding cut as big mistake

Oliver's former mayor believes that cutting funding to the Oliver Music in the Park is a mistake that could negatively impact the community.

Funding cuts were made as last week's session by council in reducing the club's request for continued annual funding.

"Regarding the club's future by funding cuts is an example of poor planning, poor communication and poor decision making," he said with concern.

Since last week the club's director of operations, led a campaign of supporters to ensure donations on July 15 to get to $1,000 this year and an annual total of $1,000 to help with youth programs. She noted the Oliver Youth Centre serves more than 10 kids and more than 1000 youth throughout the year.

"We've not been looking for help from the town, we've been looking for help from the community," she said.

In April she was awarded a letter from the town stating that no funding was to be provided and that she should get off her own feet.

Mayor and his team in the budget are hard to measure and the town doesn't want to create a situation where the club depends on it every year.

Mayor said they contribute about $700,000 to youth and recreation, and a whopping $175,000 to the Parks and Recreation Centre, which is primarily used for youth. The breakdown includes $10,000 for the arena, $17,000 for the pool, $10,000 for parks and newly installed for recreation programs.

"I have a huge investment in this community and we've not wanted our focus to go to youth and recreation," said Mayor Ron Hynes.

He encouraged the club to approach Parks and Recreation for annual funding.

Mayor said it's easier to get support from other agencies, such as the United Way when local government steps up to the money plate.

The reduced financial benefits of the club, in planning for their future youth centre, for example, helps take out of equation for youth and it costs $1.75 for a young person to appear to court for an offence such as theft and other on there.

Town undergoing services review

The Town of Oliver is undergoing a "health check" to review its current services programs.

A consultant has been hired to conduct a review of services, which looks at all departments and staffing levels. The goal is to ensure better practices and efficiency to allow the Town to operate more flexibly in the future.

"What we're really doing is a form of health check on the town," said Mayor Ron Hynes. He stated that nothing prevented the club it's just the right thing to do. The mayor pointed out that other municipalities have gone through similar reviews and it's a good idea to do so.

Hynes said they haven't identified any service problems and have assured the workers' union there are no hidden agendas.

"We have very talented people (staff) and hard working people, and I hope the review reflects that."

Hynes said the review might recommend that some staff be hired, and it might recommend that positions be eliminated.

The consultant has been interviewing employees, councilors and management staff to get a better idea of what's working and what can be improved. "The consultant that we're doing things well," Hynes said.

Council expects to see a report with recommendations by the end of September.
