asunaron Pepito is a newly released comic-novel written and illustrated by Ms. Valentina Holm, with colorful illustrations by Mr. Raoul G. Trinidad. The book is about the life of little Pepito, who lives in a tree and has an adventurous time in his adventures with his friends in the forest and in their house on the hilltop. The story is told through lyrical verse that reflects on this world we live in, often expressing loneliness and sadness that comes from being different from others or unappreciated for what we do, like Pepito's father who makes baskets out of leaves to sell but doesn't get enough money for food at home. In each chapter, there is a factual section at the beginning which informs the reader about the various topics that the book covers, such as forest life, birds with babies, or stories from Indian mythology.

The story starts with Pepito sitting on a tree doing nothing. Every day he would just stay there and watch people go by. When he saw a bird flying high up in the sky with a baby bird in its beak, he jumped off from his tree and flew after it. After a few minutes chasing the bird to get his baby back, Pepito did not know how to get back down to earth. All of a sudden he heard someone calling him but it was so dark so he could not see who it was. The voice told him to grab its hand and it will bring him back down. As he grabbed the hand, he knew that it was not a person, but it felt like a branch from a tree. Because of this, he thought he was tricked by the bird and tried to let go but something held on to his hand and told him not to let go because if he did, his hand will be broken. He finally realized that it wasn't a person but a tree branch holding on to him. He finally reached the ground safely and ran home as fast as he could since he hurt his foot because of walking barefoot. When Pepito walked in the house, he thought that it was a dream because his father was not working and all of his cousins were playing in their houses. He went up to his mother's work place and asked her to save his baby. His mother told him how he fell from the tree and broke his foot like a stone. She said that there is nothing they can do since it is already broken. He finally understood what the voice told him about grabbing its hand and bringing him down safely. He then cried all night and did not want to go outside anymore since everything reminded him of what happened to him. The next day, Pepito wanted to go out and play with his friends but he could not move because of the pain in his foot. His father asked him for help and told him to put his foot on a piece of paper and put weights on it to break it. Pepito was so happy that he started laughing again and ran out of the house for such a simple idea by his father. After playing with friends, they went home and asked how Pepito's foot is doing since they were worried that they might need to take him to the doctor. When he ran up to them, everything reminded him of what happened so he could not hold back anymore and started crying again.
